HISTORY OF OREGON

EARLY SETTLERS (1840's)

The first settlement in the area can be attributed to Bartley Runey who built a log cabin in 1841 just south of the present day Village of Oregon at the junction of Union Road and Old Stage Road, located along the "Old Lead Trail." The tavern that he established there became a favorite stopping place for teamsters hauling lead from Mineral Point to Milwaukee. It was also located along the mail route from Janesville to Madison.

Robert Thomson, the first settler in what was to become the Village of Oregon, built a log cabin in 1842 along the banks of what is now Thompson's Creek, near Janesville and S. Perry Parkway. A large Victorian farmhouse, built on the property in 1889 by Robert's nephew, George Thomson, has since been moved to a site outside the village.

C.P. Mosely was also one of the first settlers. He built a part log, part frame house and tavern in 1843 near the site of the present day water tower on Janesville Street. It served as a place for religious and business meetings for the early settlers and became the nucleus of the central village area. It was later purchased by I.M. Bennett and operated as a country general store and tavern. The initial meetings organizing the Presbyterian Church were held there.

- It is very important to put safety first and to be aware of the riders and vehicles around you.
1. Obey all traffic laws.
  2. Wear ANSI/SNELL approved helmets at all times.
  3. Ride on the right and pass on the left side only.
  4. Communicate with fellow riders with terms such as "on left."
  5. Do not brake suddenly and maintain a straight path as much as possible.

SAFETY FIRST!

RAILROAD COMES TO OREGON (1864-1865)

The Beloit and Madison Railroad (later part of the Chicago and Northwestern) extended the line through the village. The railroad was very significant for Oregon to become the nucleus of settlement in the area. Oregon became an important nucleus of trade, a shipping point for livestock to the Chicago market (1890-1930). At the height of rail activity about 15 carloads per week of livestock went out of Oregon. Grain shipments of wheat and oats numbered about 100 cars/month.

SUMMARY

Oregon was primarily settled in the mid-1850's and became a vibrant farming community. Oregon became the center of a much enlarged trade territory. Merchants, artisans and tradesmen set up shop in the village and served the needs of the population. The village was the center of economic and social life for the area residents. As the village grew and became more central to the people, the outlying settlements soon declined (Lakeview, Oak Hall, Union, Rutland, Storytown).

Very significant changes come after World War II. The coming of age of the automobile for transportation and all the new highways and roads clearly mark the change from the agricultural community to a "bedroom" community.

It is "community" that makes Oregon a special place. Oregon is what we call home.

ARCHITECTURE OF SOUTH MAIN ST.

The South Main Street Historic District is architecturally significant as an intact and visually distinct grouping of late nineteenth and early twentieth century commercial buildings. These buildings create a distinctive downtown area. Eleven buildings in the district were built between 1877 and 1915. The World War Memorial was erected in 1920.

This area also has the largest concentration of architecturally significant historic commercial buildings in Oregon, including two notable examples of Romanesque Revival (Netherwood Building and the Marvin Hardware's Mesric Lodge). A third example of a Romanesque Revival-type building is the McDermott Building.

This area served as the core of Oregon's business district from 1877 to 1948. Many of the most important businesses were located in the South Main Street district.

Please Note: Many of the stops along the West Lincoln Street route are private residences and are not open to the public. Please respect the owners' privacy and avoid trespassing on private property. Please view these properties only from the public right-of-way.
